Section I: Letter of Intent (max. 3800 characters incl. spaces)

Your letter of intent should clearly and briefly describe how your ongoing or completed research project significantly contributes or has contributed to the better understanding of stress and resilience or generates / has generated breakthrough advances at the cutting edge of the disciplines explored in this light.

Section II: Research Project

A. Project Title and Keywords (up to 5)

B. Abstract (max. 2000 characters incl. spaces)

C. Research Project

I. Introduction (max. 2000 characters incl. spaces)

Introduce the scientific paradigm through a concise and targeted literature review, highlighting the references and previous scientific research that has inspired your research. Situate it in its scientific context by outlining your theoretical and empirical starting-points; if there is no context, please explain why, and state the premises upon which it was/is based.

II. Hypothesis (max. 1000 characters incl. spaces)

Articulate clearly the hypothesis you wished to present and test in the realization of this research project.

III. Methods (max. 3100 characters incl. spaces)
Describe the methods used to test the hypotheses.

IV. Expected results (max. 3100 characters incl. spaces)

Try to give a good but brief indication of what you expect / expected to get out of the research: the range of outcomes expected, how such outcomes might be interpreted to answer the research question, and their significance in terms of the scientific framework outlined above.

D. Laboratory/team name and details
